History

Assar was established during the Ancient Ophir Period, one of the outermost cities of the Malliq's soon-to-be realm at the time. Originally built upon somewhat fertile ground, the Sarab desert slowly inched closer and closer, and merely a few generations later part of the city bordered the desert itself.

Geography and climate

Due to the strong winds coming from the sea, as well as from the Sarab desert, the air is always fresh in Assar. One of its titles is also "the windy city", bringing respite from the heat during summer but also punising the unprepared with icy winds during the short winter period.

Demographics

Being a port town and trading hub, Assar has a high population of Azraqi. Many ship captains, ship builders, fishermen any any other who hits the sea are ethnically Azraqi. The second highest population are the Ramaadi, who seem to favor the trade coming from the land, with small pockets of Bayadi and a small amount of mixed children (Khudari) popping up. As Assar is one of the few ports from which Nilfgaard can be reached, a few of them can be seen at times, though usually as guests and not residents.

Economy

Assar lives from its port, from trade and fishing, from being a cultural center as much as a nexus of espionage and secrets.

Districts

- Harbor: The beating heart of the city. Dotted with warehouses, dry docks, taverns, inns, anything a sailor desires.
- Tradesman Quarter: The place where many tools are created, repaired or are prepared for daily use.
- Kashmiri Quarter: The part of the city where hedonistic pleasures are sated.
- The Sheik's Terrace: The noble quarter of the city where many administrative buildings are housed.
- The Commons: Where most of the people live, day in day out.

Notes

- The name was originally envisioned by Witcher190 and/or Adalwulf of Aedirn.
- Assar is the birth place of Kareem Alnader.
